An applicant with a Master's degree will also be considered in terms of his/her Ph.D. pursuit potential.

Stage Two: The school will conduct a teaching demonstration assessment by convening a committee to evaluate candidates' potential in the following areas:

- Teaching ability: This includes systematic lesson planning, effective knowledge delivery, and student assessment.
- Academic competency: Candidates should demonstrate broad knowledge in their respective fields, in-depth expertise in the subjects they will teach, and the potential to excel as scholars.

Stage Three: Candidates who pass stage two will proceed to a university-level interview. The interview will assess academic knowledge and overall suitability based on various factors, such as attitude, interest, commitment, communication skills, interpersonal relations, and overall personality. Successful candidates will be considered for appointment as university faculty members.

Note: Mae Fah Luang University reserves the right to select and interview only applicants who meet the university's qualifications and requirements.

Applicants must ensure that their qualifications match the requirements of the position. If an applicant is later found to be unqualified, their application will be deemed invalid, and they will not be eligible for appointment. The university reserves the right to close the application process once a suitable candidate has been selected.
